Ly's family seeks answers in slaying

Silence. Months after the death of Don Ly, his family is begging for the public's help in finding the killer.

It's been more than four months since popular fruit cart vendor and hardworking Vietnamese immigrant Don Ly, 68, was stabbed to death outside his South Philadelphia home — a senseless slaying with no apparent motive.

"It's been silence," his son Hoanh Ly said yesterday at the family home. "It's been horrible. We just expected somebody to come forward, but so far, nothing."

Ly's daughter Nary Ly said the crime and its lack of resolution has taken a toll on her family, especially Don's wife of 42 years.

"My mother used to say thousands of words a day," Nary said. "Now she says maybe 50." She barely eats and has dropped about 50 percent of her body weight since the murder. "She has talked about ending her life so she can be with him," Nary said. "But she still has us children."

Police in May released surveillance footage of a suspect. Hoanh said he watches it often, but mostly to see how many people have viewed the YouTube video. "I know the guy's somewhere," he said. "He probably sleeps somewhere. He must have a brother, sister, a parent somewhere that know him and they're actually hiding him."

Quoted

"We are concerned who will be the next victim and we hope that the reward will encourage someone to come forward with information. We desperately need help and we want to find justice for our father." Nary Ly

The Citizen's Crime Commission has added $5,000 to the city's standard $20,000 reward for information leading to homicide convictions, but investigators said tips have been so far fruitless.

"He does not deserve to sleep on the bed just like we are," Hoanh said of the suspect. "He does not deserve to eat the food just like we are. He deserves to eat the food in the prison, prison food in a prison cell, prison bed, that's what he deserves. And we don't know who he is and where he is."

Grants

More funds for LIHEAP recipients

After a delay in processing applications for Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program crisis grants during the 2012 through 2013 heating season sparked outrage among participants, the state Department of Public Welfare yesterday announced extra funds will be doled out to eligible Pennsylvanians to help with next winter's heating costs.

Each household that was deemed eligible to receive a LIHEAP grant will also be sent a $200 supplemental cash payment in early September. Consumers will this week receive letters informing them of the extra funds.

Defenseless. The man who allegedly kidnapped his girlfriend’s baby is charged with murder.

The alleged kidnapper is now an alleged murderer.

Police Superintendent Michael Chitwood announced yesterday that 30-year-old Ummad Rushdi, the York County man who was already charged with kidnapping his girlfriend’s 7-month-old child from an Upper Darby house, was charged with the infant’s murder.

Hamza Ali / UPPER DARBY POLICE

The child, Hamza Ali, was last seen alive on Aug. 4 while Rushdi and the infant’s mother, Zainab Gaal, visited Rushdi’s parents in Upper Darby. Later that weekend, Rushdi said he accidentally killed the baby, and then drove to York to bury the remains, according to court documents. The three lived together in Windsor Township in York.

The mother has been placed in a secure location, Chitwood said.

“Every night she’s crying, begging for us to find the baby,” he said. “It’s just not that easy, you know?”

The question is, “What did he do to the baby?” Chitwood said.

The suspect knows where the baby is, Chitwood said, but he won’t tell police. Authorities have extensively searched for Hamza Ali’s body in Upper Darby and York to no avail.

“This is the really sad thing,” Chitwood said. “The baby can’t be retrieved.”

Party's over. Temple University cancels annual Spring Fling

Temple University officials, pointing to such trends as "high-risk drinking," have canceled the decades-old Spring Fling event because it has "lost its value."

The university announced the cancellation in an email to the student body Monday night.

"A dangerous culture of high-risk drinking has infiltrated the event, undermining our academic mission and our duty to safeguard student health and wellness," said Stephanie Ives, dean of students, in the email.

The event was originally designed to bring the formerly commuter-driven student body together on the North Broad Street campus in a celebration of solidarity and school spirit.

In April, 19-year-old Ali Fausnaught, a student at West Chester University, died after she fell off the roof of an off-campus house that was hosting a party during Spring Fling. She was visiting her boyfriend, a Temple student.

Ali Fausnaught / FACEBOOK

University officials said it would work with student groups to organize and develop alternative campus-wide events for the spring.

"By and large, the consensus was that it is time for us to re-think how best to unite and engage students," Ives said in the email. "A university-wide event such as Spring Fling can no longer be reasonably and responsibly sponsored by the university when it has been overshadowed by dangerous behaviors." METRO

West could hit Syria in days, envoys tell rebels

Western forces could attack Syria within days, the United States and its allies have told rebels fighting President Bashar al-Assad, opening up new risks in a war that is spreading hatred across the Middle East.

Participants at a meeting in Istanbul told Reuters that U.S. and other diplomats warned Syrian opposition leaders on Monday to expect action that would punish Assad for poison gas attacks — and to be ready to negotiate if his government sues for peace.

British Prime Minister David Cameron, anxious like President Obama not to emulate the Afghan and Iraqi entanglements that beset their predecessors, said any strikes would be "specific," a penalty for the use of chemical weapons and would not drag the allies deeper into a Syrian civil war now in its third year.

He recalled parliament for a debate on Syria tomorrow. REUTERS

Obama, Canada PM agree Syria merits firm response

U.S. President Barack Obama and Canadian Prime Minister Stephen Harper yesterday agreed that the use of chemical weapons in Syria merited a firm, effective and timely response from the international community, a spokesman for Harper said.

The two leaders talked amid mounting signs that Washington and its allies are edging toward a limited use of force against Syrian President Bashar al-Assad's loyalists in the wake of a poison gas attack last week that killed hundreds of civilians. REUTERS

White House rules out Syrian 'regime change' from options

Syrian President Bashar al-Assad / GETTY IMAGES

Action. A spokesman reiterated that Obama had not made a decision on how the U.S. will respond.

The White House ruled out any military effort to oust Syrian President Bashar al-Assad from power yesterday as President Barack Obama ponders options in response to last week's chemical weapons attack in Syria.

"The options that we are considering are not about regime change," said White House spokesman Jay Carney. "They are about responding to a clear violation of an international standard that prohibits the use of chemical weapons."

Obama is considering cruise missile strikes against Syrian targets in response to the Aug. 21 chemical weapons attack that U.S. officials are increasingly confident was launched by the Syrian government.

Carney said the United States expects to release in coming days a public version of a formal report by the U.S. intelligence community on the use of chemical weapons. The report is expected to conclude the Syrian government was responsible for the attack.

Any attempt at "regime change" by the United States would draw the United States deeply into a conflict that Obama has been determined to avoid. The president has already ruled out putting U.S. troops on the ground in Syria.

Carney said the United States has a variety of options from which to use, not just military options. Most of the talk about Syria in recent days, however, has been about a limited cruise missile attack. REUTERS

Eight months after massacre, Newtown starts new school year

Shooting site.
The building is scheduled to be torn down and replaced by a new structure.

The Connecticut town that was the site of a shooting rampage that left 20 elementary school students and six faculty and staff dead last December appeared largely the same yesterday as it did a year ago.

But as students from Newtown's Sandy Hook Elementary School began their first full academic year at their temporary quarters in the former Chalk Hill school in nearby Monroe, residents said life has changed.

"It's like after 9/11. The world looks different. It is different," said Kris Mauro, 46, a Newtown resident. "Everybody looks the same, everybody's just as nice. But it's a different world."

Mauro said her chief frustration is that she had hoped "we'd get rid of all the guns," but that gun-rights groups have instead been emboldened since the shooting.

The massacre inspired a package of national gun control measures in Congress as well as calls for better security in schools, including the presence of armed guards.

The ages of the victims, mostly 6- and 7-year-olds, stunned the country.

Census. Families shift as fewer households include children

The iconic picture of the traditional American household has faded over the last four decades as the number of married couples with children has seen a steep decline and more people are living alone, according to U.S. Census Bureau data.

Since 1970, the portion of U.S. households that include families with two married parents and children fell by half, from 40 percent to 20 percent last year, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

"That's at a historic low," Jonathan Vespa, one of the report's co-authors and a researcher in the Census Bureau's Fertility and Family Statistics Branch, told Reuters yesterday.

Meanwhile, the number of single-person households grew from 17 percent in 1970 to nearly 28 percent in 2012, according to the Census' report. REUTERS

Johns. Modest start for Switzerland's first drive-in 'sex boxes'

Greeted by a press pack rather than prostitutes, the first customer to roll up to Switzerland's sex drive-in on opening night took one lap of the facility before making a hasty exit.

The second car, a family vehicle driven by a man in sunglasses under cloudy evening skies, broke down and needed jump-starting in front of a host of photographers sniggering into their cameras.

Zurich authorities had said they expected a modest start to the country's first so-called "sex boxes," a row of drive-in wooden garages on a looping track where clients in cars can visit prostitutes, shielded from prying eyes and security cameras.

The number of prostitutes in the Alpine nation has risen sharply over the last decade, due to the decriminalization of procuring and passive solicitation of sex alongside agreements between Switzerland and the European Union on free movement of people.

The sex boxes, which echo similar drive-in systems in the Netherlands and Germany, are being touted as a way to get large numbers of prostitutes and their clients off Switzerland's otherwise pristine streets.

Between 7 p.m. and 5 a.m., men can cruise along the track and choose a prostitute from shelters before parking in one drive-in boxes. REUTERS

With an estimated annual turnover of around 3.5 billion Swiss francs ($3.79 billion), prostitution has been legal in Switzerland since 1942, with sex workers in Zurich required to have a special permit, health insurance and pay tax.

Speech. His address is credited with helping spur passage of the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964.

An address by President Barack Obama and nationwide bell-ringing will cap celebrations today marking the 50th anniversary of civil rights leader Martin Luther King's landmark "I have a dream" speech.

Obama will speak during the "Let Freedom Ring and Call to Action" commemoration on the steps of Washington's Lincoln Memorial, the site of King's address on Aug. 28, 1963, the White House said.

Other speakers include former Presidents Jimmy Carter and Bill Clinton. The ceremony will follow an interfaith service at Shiloh Baptist Church in Washington, organizers said.

The speech by Obama will come as almost half of Americans say much more needs to be done before the color-blind society that King envisioned is realized.

Obama said last week that the legacy of discrimination had left a persistent economic gap between blacks and whites, but that the civil rights movement's impulse for equality had spread to Hispanics, immigrants, gays and others.

The ceremony will include bell-ringing at 3 p.m., 50 years to the minute after King ended his call for racial and economic justice with the words "let freedom ring." REUTERS

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Joel McHale has been living under a rock and Nick Cannon is finding it hard to be humble.

@joelmchale: About to watch the #VMA's on my DVR. Anything notable or provocative I should be watching out for?

@NickCannon: Just heard if ur prettier than u are talented you won't make it. I guess that's why I never sold any albums. I was just too damn pretty! LOL

'N Stink

Yesterday, I wrote about how personally butthurt I felt about the way Justin "Too Good For the Little People Now That I Roll with Jay-Z" Timberlake gave his ex-bandmates the shaft at their big VMA "reunion." I wasn't the only one with mixed feelings.

According to US Magazine, Chris Kirpatrick and co. didn't exactly have glowing things to report.

"All of us getting back together, we remembered what we love about each other and what we hate about each other," Kirkpatrick said, methodically sticking pins into a voodoo doll he'd crafted from tufts of impossibly silky blonde hair he'd collected from Timberlake's dressing room post-show. "It was just a bit of fun."

OK, OK, obviously I'm kidding about that whole hair doll thing. There's no way they'd let Kirkpatrick within 20 feet of Timberlake's dressing room!

Lance Bass didn't have much to say on the subject, either, other than that he felt really "nauseous" the whole time. Whether this was due to stage fright (it's been a while!) or the noxious odor of resentment and defeat (kind of like rotten eggs and cheap cologne), is unclear.

Jon and Kate plus a lawsuit

Remember Kate Gosselin? The woman who was famous for a couple of minutes for having a thousand kids? No, not the one with the tentacles, the one with the mullet. Yeah, that one!

Gosselin — previously of "Jon and Kate Plus Eight" fame, currently just another sad, harried mom with bad hair — is making headlines again, likely to her immense relief. Because, where does one go after flash-in-the-pan reality TV fame? (The answer is Kmart.)

Kate is suing ex-husband/bonafide creep Jon Gosselin for allegedly hacking into her email to access top-secret information for an eBook that nobody has heard of and nobody will read (because Jon Gosselin wrote it, and because it's an eBook) called "Kate Gosselin: How She Fooled the World."

The only one fooled was you, Jon.

That's my girl!

So, while everyone else in the free world was freaking out about Miley's performance at the VMAs Sunday, Billy Ray Cyrus was just all "chill out, geez, take a God break" via Twitter.

Following Hannah Mount-ya-Tana's butt-flapping VMA performance, in the wee early hours of Monday morning (probably because he was up trying to drown the memory of his daughter's bare butt from his brain with booze and drugs), he tweeted "Thanking God for so many blessings tonight. Continue to pray for world peace. More love ...less hate."

Not that there's anything wrong with thanking the man upstairs for all the good twerk or anything, but does this talk of blessings in conjunction with his half-naked daughter prancing around on a stage remind anyone else of another leery stage father who was just a bit too cool with his daughter flaunting her budding sexuality? (Google "Joe Simpson / Jessica / breasts.)

Creeped out? My job is done here.

A bit of old-fashioned paranoia

Topical thriller.
Great actors try to help an airport novel-level drama.

Review

'Closed Circuit'

Director: John Crowley

Stars: Rebecca Hall, Eric Bana

Rating: R

Eric Bana looks vaguely suspicious in "Closed Circuit." / JAY MAIDMENT

The American films of the 1970s were informed by justified paranoia, coming from a time when various fits of government malfeasance — Watergate, the Vietnam War — were out in the open. Today's institutional underhandedness tends to be a bit more covert. A smart thriller about corrupt agencies murdering journalists and snooping bureaucrats would address that. "Closed Circuit" is not that movie. It's a holdover from a bygone era. Here, the bodies that rule us (or England, where it takes place) just kill everybody in their way, and sloppily at that. It's an airport novel in a "topical" outrage machine's clothes.

Rebecca Hall and Erica Bana are the two main overqualified actors contributing to the air of importance. (Jim Broadbent and Ciaran Hinds fill out supporting roles.) A 7/7-style act of terrorism has occurred, and a Turkish emigre (Denis Moschitto) is suspected of ties to the bombing. But the case is wishy-washy, and the lawyers played by Hall and Bana see right through it. Their investigations reveal a massive conspiracy that seems to go right to the top, and brings on scary supporting characters and conveniently incompetent assassins.

"Closed Circuit" touches on — and really only touches on — big issues, among them how many civil liberties we're willing to surrender for the illusion of safety, government accountability and racism as England becomes increasingly multicultural. (That doesn't stop it from employing a shady Arab heavy, played by Riz Ahmed.) It takes on the appearance of intelligence, from the casting to the slow burn plotting to the direction of John Crowley ("Boy A"), which adopts a sleek reticence that, even in the face of escalating horror, is purely English.

But the film is never compelling enough to cover up the cliched rot at the center. (A chilling opening bombing, told entirely through security footage, is the noted exception.) This is a film where our two leads just happen to be old flames who may or may not get back together. And it's a film where a minor character's death makes front-page news. The silliness piles up, each one nicking away at the film's dwindling credibility. It doesn't even have the courage of its paranoid convictions, turning suddenly and undeservingly reassuring when it should go whole-hog bleak-o-rama. It's a liability that a film like this winds up having hope.

This is like that show "Dance Moms," except with ... cheer moms? These are women who probably peaked in high school and whose lives are so empty that they are trying to live vicariously through their tween daughters. Giving good face at the second Made in America music festival

Parkway. Walk the Moon's bassist has a Tumblr page devoted to his weird expressions.

Walk the Moon will be in town Saturday. / RCA RECORDS

Tell Kevin Ray, bassist for the neo-New Wave band Walk the Moon, that he has an awkward face and he'll take it in stride.

After all, there's a Tumblr page dedicated to the awkward faces he makes onstage.

"It's not something I aspired to as a kid but now that it's happening, I'm aspiring to it every day," Ray says. "There's actually one on my hair, too, and [guitarist Eli Maiman's] beard has one."

The awkward face fun is part of the spirit of the band — non-pretentious, energetic and upbeat. It'll be on display Saturday on the Parkway as part of the second Made in America Festival.

Quoted

"It's not something I aspired to as a kid but now that it's happening, I'm aspiring to it every day."

Ray, on the awkward faces he makes on stage

Walk the Moon, formed in Cincinnati in 2008, broke through with its 2011 infectious rocker "Anna Sun."

"Organic is the perfect word for it," says Ray of the band's sound. "We have a lot of influences from eras of music that relied heavily on great musicianship and the sound of a band. ... Going into our self-titled album [2012's "Walk the Moon" on RCA Records], a major part of our focus was trying to recreate that organic type of feel, and that's what actually ended up happening. We recorded a lot of it in a room together and that's why you have that type of energy."

The energy should mix in well with the diverse sounds of this year's Made in America. There's everything from the flashy and funny hip-hop of 2 Chainz to the industrial flashback of Nine Inch Nails to the earnest rock sounds of new hit makers Imagine Dragons to the club music of Calvin Harris.

The fest is curated by Jay-Z — and he's bringing along Mrs. Carter.

"I'm aware of the lineup last year, and this year it's gotten even more crazy. From us to Beyonce, it's really all over the place," Ray says. "It seems like a good lineup for music fans in general."

And a good lineup for awkward faces, too. Beyonce, who also performs on Saturday, famously flashed a few awkward faces of her own during her performance at last year's Super Bowl.

"[Beyonce] should just embrace it," Ray says. "Not only are they faces, but they're providing the Internet with tons of enjoyment."

Friends of Clark Park want to make sure the farmers market isn't affected. / J. FUSCO FOR GPTMC

Some people won't know anything about the proposed 4224 Baltimore Ave. apartment building until construction begins on the empty lot across from Clark Park. Others have been privy to this U3 Ventures development for months and have even had a hand in shaping what the building will be and who it will cater to. One such person is Erin Engelstad, president of the volunteer committee Friends of Clark Park.

Engelstad was involved in the community meetings that brought U3 Ventures together with area residents to discuss the future of the currently vacant corner.

"The first meeting was where [U3 Ventures] presented what [its] idea was to the community," says Engelstad. "They got feedback from everyone. Then we were broken up into work groups, and each group had a different focus."

According to Engelstad, the second meeting consisted of renderings of what U3 Ventures had in mind based on the feedback it received.

One thing she wants is condos included in 4224 Baltimore Ave., not just apartments. Owners tend to be more involved in the community — and its upkeep — than renters.

The idea is that with enough input from developers and neighbors, a building can go up that will improve the block without changing the charm too much.

4224 Baltimore Ave.

How high?

"Parking and retail are hot topics," she says. "People in the community wanted to see an underground garage, and retail space on the ground floor. Those things are very expensive, so the developers said that the building would need to go higher to cover the cost."

H&M launches home line in the US

Decor. The collection includes Bohemian lace sheets and digital print curtains.

H&M knows you care about swapping out those summery sheer curtains for cozy new ones just as much as you care about scoring the perfect moto jacket for fall — but that you don't want to spend $100 a panel.

The Swedish retailer recently launched H&M home, a line of on-trend textiles and decor that was previously available only in Europe.

Now on www.hm.com — that's right, the fast-fashion brand finally has e-commerce up and running — you can find chic home essentials, including throws, pillows, bed sheets and shower curtains — all in a variety of styles. There are Baroque designs, lace and florals for the Bohemians — including one chic French-inspired storage basket that we've got our eye on — plus digital prints and animal graphics for those who prefer modern flare. If earthy is more your thing, there's plenty of warm Navajo patterns. The best part: The pieces range from $3.95 to $34.95. Time for a home makeover? We think so.

You can find H&M's new home line at www.hm.com. / PROVIDED

Get your makeup bag ready for fall

Product fix. Tips and advice from Bluemercury founder Marla Malcolm.

No cure for end-of-summer blues, Bluemercury could fix fall. / BLUEMERCURY

More of a full-service beauty oasis than a store, Bluemercury is all about customer education. Just browsing? That's OK, says co-founder Marla Malcolm Beck: "We're happy to have people leave with samples and just try things. There's no pressure in our environment."

Bluemercury staff are experts in their fields and, according to Beck, excited to teach the tricks of their trade.

"We launch about 100 new products in our stores per month," she says. "So, it's this idea of a neighborhood store where you can get advice and a great mix of brands."

We asked Beck — who says, "good skin comes first, and makeup second" — for some go-to beauty tips to get us ready for fall.

Is it a good idea to switch your makeup regimen as the seasons change, to go darker in fall and winter?
The fall switch is the most important switch because you really need something that brightens your face as the weather gets dull and your skin gets dry. You definitely need a new lip color because your skin tone changes in the fall. You tend to need more coverage of your skin because as our skin tone fades, the hyper-pigmentation shows up even more.

What are some hot lip colors for this coming fall?
The two extremes that we're seeing are the red lip and the nude lip.

What are some products for a girl on a budget?
Mario Badescu is a brand we've been carrying forever. All of his moisturizers are $18 to $19. Cleansers [are] the same.

Malcolm says, "Invest in bronzer." / PROVIDED

What's one product every woman should own?
Bronzer. If you're not going to do anything before you go out the door, you can swipe a little bit of bronzer on your cheeks and on your upper eyelid. NARS Laguna ($36) is a pretty universal bronzer. If you're not used to makeup, you'll actually be amazed at what that does for you."

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO
alexandra.cavallo@metro.us

Her picks

Three essentials

SkinCeuticals Fusion SPF 15 sunblock ($34)
"Overall, SkinCeuticals makes the best sunblock on the market. It's the only thing I'll use on my kids and myself, but this one has a little hint of color. It's almost like having a foundation/sunblock on."

Trish McEvoy High Volume mascara ($31)
"It's my favorite mascara. It's got the Japanese tube formula. Rather than color your eyelashes, like most mascaras, it tubes around. It doesn't flake off, or come off when you're in the ocean. But if you rub it off with water, it comes off, which is a funny thing. That means you don't need all these heavy makeup removers that irritate your eyes."

M-61 Vitablast C ($92)
"Vitamin C is my absolute favorite ingredient of all time because it builds collagen and prevents hyper-pigmentation, and you really feel it in your skin if you use it over time. My favorite — I'm a little biased — is our brand, M-61's Vitablast C."

3-D printed humanoids on view at World Maker Faire

Tech. Next month's big event allows patrons to view a newfangled robot.

If you're attending World Maker Faire in New York next month, be sure to see the progress Chuck Fletcher has made on his InMoov robot, an open-source humanoid robot that anyone can print and motorize.

"I will be bringing a fully articulated and animated 3-D printed humanoid animatronic robot," Fletcher says. "This is an amazing project with hundreds of parts and a growing community of makers adding features like eye-tracking, hand and finger control. The build will be complete in time for World Maker Faire. I believe there have been InMoov bots partially assembled at other Maker Faires, but this robot will be a complete upper body build."

Chuck Fletcher's InMoov robot can be controlled by anyone.
PROVIDED

InMoov's Gael Langevin's Thingiverse website (www.thingiverse.com) features part downloads and other people's spin-offs and derivatives. He says what may be most intriguing about this project is the possibility of using the robotic hands and feet as prostheses.

Erase yourself from the Internet with Justdelete.me

Deleting yourself from the Internet is hard work. First, you have to decide where exactly you want to disappear and then you have to figure out how you're going to do it.

A new site called Justdelete.me makes vanishing from the Web much, much easier. The site is a directory of URLs that highlights links to pages you may want to remove yourself from, so you don't have to jump through hoops to do so. This includes sites like Facebook, Foursquare, Dropbox and Feedly.

Justdelete.me ranks each site's process from "easy" to "impossible." For example, Amazon and Newyorktimes.com are rated "hard" to delete, while movie directory Imdb.com and PayPal are listed as "easy." Sites such as Pinterest and Netflix are "impossible." MASHABLE

Plus: How to buy a sports bra

Heed this advice from Audrey Kirkland, the brand manager of sports bras for New Balance.

Get regularly measured

"Seventy to 80 percent don't know their current bra size because you gain weight, you lose weight, you have children. … It's best to get measured every six to 12 months."

Go by activity

"If you're doing yoga, you don't need as much [support] as if you're running."

Don't rely on straps

"If you think of it like building a house, you build your foundation first and then build up. It's the same with the bra: You build that foundation with your bottom band. The least amount of work should be by your straps. If all that weight is hanging on your shoulders, that's where a lot of ladies come up with back problems."

Small? You still need a good fit

"I get a lot of ladies who are an A cup or a B cup. You need to protect your breasts, take care of them and keep them supported — because then they're going to stay a little firmer over time."

Keep 'em front and center

"Get your high points level looking ahead."

Health tips the tennis pros swear by

U.S. Open stars credit these diet and fitness secrets for their peak performances. MEREDITH ENGEL

James Blake (USA)

Get your sleep

"I think being on the road and traveling as much as we do, it's tough with the jet lag and going into the times zones, but you've gotta find a way to get your eight hours at least. And when you do that, you're usually gonna eat better."

Janko Tipsarevic (Serbia)

Go all out

"It's good to feel dead after a fitness practice — not dead, but completely exhausted, because sore body today, stronger body tomorrow. There are some times you think it's too hard, it's too heavy, but it will for sure pay off later on."

Get involved

Give a smile

Stephens is working with Listerine's #HealthySmiles program, which will donate $2 for every tweet with a smile emoticon and the hashtag #HealthySmiles. The money will go to Oral Health America's Smiles Across America, which gives dental care to kids in need.

Through Sept. 13, a minimum donation of $15,000 will be made (up to $35,000). Only one entry allowed per person/account per day, up to 17,500 participants.

Sloane Stephens (USA)

Stretch correctly

"I use stretching to minimize the risk of injury. Before a game I like to get my blood pumping, so I do some active stretching, like jumping from one leg to the next as I stretch out my inner thighs, or bouncing on my tippy toes to stretch out my calves. Post-game it is more important to rid your muscles of lactic acid, so my stretching is not as active. Most stretches I do after the game include me standing still while working out my muscles."

Don't get mad when your kids take the lead

Re: '"Dreams" a nightmare for parents' (Metro, Aug. 21) Letter writer Regina Deriso bemoans her "lost" dreams relative to her son pursuing his "dreams." Is this why we have children? So that we can fob off our dreams on them? Is her son his own person or just an extension of her and his father? News flash lady, your son didn't ask to be born. He didn't ask you to give up anything for him. That was a choice you made and the vile you feel can't be healthy. Please learn to let it go and allow your son to live his life, make his choices and be proud of him.

Graduates pointless without jobs

Obama wants to look out for the students who "our higher education institutions exist to serve." Here's a novel idea, sir: How about YOU create some jobs so that our graduates can actually have a paycheck to pay down the debt they incur?

Cruel, cruel Mets

The New York Mets traded away Marlon Byrd yesterday to the Pirates. Fair enough. However, the team was giving fans Marlon Byrd T-shirts as part of last night's promotion. Byrd, who is batting .285 this season, played for the Phillies from 2002-04.

Kelly, Roseman work in complete 'utopia'

NFL. Eagles brass, all on the same page as final cuts loom, plan on a hectic weekend in the war room.

Chip Kelly is making a list. And he's checking it twice.

As final roster cuts loom, the Eagles' coach has a few evaluations left to make. While some have speculated that general manager Howie Roseman is calling the shots, Kelly made it clear yesterday that he has final say on the 53-man roster. That's not to say he doesn't respect Roseman's opinion. In fact, according to Kelly, the two rarely disagree.

"It's utopia," Kelly said. "We're on the same page in everything. There has not been a decision that's been made personnel-wise where I've felt one way and he's [Roseman] felt the other way."

Kelly and Roseman will have one final game to glean as much as they can from the roster. Then, it's off to a padded war room to decide which players take the field in the opener. The buzz word Kelly kept throwing around before practice was "versatility."

"I'm not getting into who has obstacles or whatever," Kelly said. "We'll play and keep the best guys, but when you talk about backup guys, they have to have versatility."

Kelly will give the team two days off after tomorrow night's game against the Jets. On Saturday, final cuts will be turned into the league office. They'll have a few light practices, then the game plan for the opener against Washington will be installed Sept. 4.

"You temper as you get closer to game day," he said. "That's a consistent message in terms of how you want to do it."

Owls no longer stuck grounded

NCAA. Temple football is taking on a pass-first identity under new coach Matt Rhule.

Whenever Temple soared under Steve Addazio — and it became less frequent as Year One's 9-4 success was trumped by Year Two's 4-7 failure — it was seldom in the air. Clearly, those Owls couldn't fly.

Now that star running backs Bernard Pierce, Montel Harris and Mack Brown — a group that amassed 3,826 rushing yards in the Addazio era — are all gone, new coach Matt Rhule has to find other ways to move the ball.

In this case, it means the Owls will likely throw, throw and then throw some more. It all begins with Saturday's highly anticipated opener at Notre Dame.

"I always thought we had guys who could catch the ball," said slot receiver Ryan Alderman, who caught just five passes last season. "They didn't want to showcase. It got frustrating at times."

Rhule has other ideas.

"Everybody's embraced this offense," said starting quarterback Connor Reilly. "The wide receivers love it. The running backs know, while it may take some carries away, the passing game will open up lanes for them to make plays. And the quarterbacks, we love to throw the rock."

Last year, Temple averaged just 121 passing yards per game, while the opposition averaged 237 yards and had 21 touchdowns in the air. That's just one reason Rhule's staff wants to open things up.

Against an Irish team with a dynamic pass rush, balance may be more prudent.

"With a quarterback making his first start, there's no greater friend than a running game, so we have to manufacture one this week," said Rhule.

Penn State. O'Brien won't name starting QB until opening play

Penn State will open its season Saturday afternoon against Syracuse in the Meadowlands.

Second-year head coach Bill O'Brien is hiding his hand, refusing to name a starting quarterback. The competition is between freshman Christian Hackenberg and junior-college transfer Tyler Ferguson.

"You'll find out who the quarterback is on the first play of the game against Syracuse," O'Brien told reporters via conference call. "I want to do what's best for the football team and what's best for Penn State." METRO

Phillies. Lee credits Sandberg for the new attitude in clubhouse

Cliff Lee stifled the Mets Monday in a 2-1 win.

The left-handed ace allowed just one run on five hits, while striking out seven in eight strong innings. After the game, Lee shared his thoughts on the new atmosphere in the Phillies' clubhouse.

"We're grinding it out a little more, just playing hard from the start to the finish," Lee said. "Basic execution. I've said that from the very beginning. If we just execute and play fundamental baseball, we can beat anyone. We've started doing that in the last week and a half or so — and the results are showing."

Lee was quick to follow that up with a frame of reference. He didn't want anyone to think he was blaming his old skipper, Charlie Manuel.

"I don't think it was Charlie's fault that we lost, and I don't think it's [Ryne] Sandberg that's winning it for us," he said. "But I think he has instilled more of a 'let's get after it' frame of mind, and that's what we're doing." METRO

Skipping a beat

The Phils aren't lighting the world on fire, but there is a buzz since the team switched managers. Here's a look at what's transpired the last two weeks:

- The Phils were 7-4 going into Tuesday's game since Charlie Manuel was fired on Aug. 16, including three walk-off wins in that span.
- The club had gone 3-8 in the 11 games prior to that under Manuel.

Un-breaking point: Wozniacki advances

Caroline Wozniacki punched her ticket to the U.S. Open's second round yesterday by beating Ying-Ying Duan. It wasn't easy for the No. 6 seed. She needed to fight off three break points to earn the victory. / GETTY IMAGES
